Director(s): Veronique BERTHONNEAU

Writer(s): Véronique BERTHONNEAU

On the night of September 26, 2019 in the city of Rouen, France, a fire brought out at the chemical factory Lubrizol. The authorities wanted to be reassuring, despite the 9000 tonnes of chemicals gone up in smoke! How did deaf residents experience this industrial accident?

Living near the site of the catastrophe, did they have access to information on what to do to protect themselves? Were they made aware of potential health, safety and environmental issues following this spectacular fire? Have there been any dysfunctions when dealing with the risks?
We speak to eye witnesses who talk of their traumatic experience, their doubts and questions...
