MELTDOWN - An Eco-soap (eps. 4 - 6)

Director(s): Christophe KILIAN, Laure NOUALHAT

Our documentary series follows the inhabitants of Joigny and above all, our 10 characters, throughout the seasons in their daily struggle with their convictions and their actions.

Episodes 4 to 6 (click on each button on the 'player'):

EP 4

Joigny goes into lockdown. Jocelyn has to build and stockpile coffins, but he also needs to teach his children how to grow potatoes. At the town hall, they'd very much like to set up an existential crisis unit. Mathilde realises, to her annoyance, that people in lockdown are a relief for the planet.

EP 5

While Alain sprays glyphosate on his vines, further down people worry. His wine is good, but what if the winemaker is a polluter? Coraline is concerned as well. Will her crops be enough to feed her family? As for the compost bin, it also threatens to decompose the good mood of local residents...

EP 6

Ludivine hopes to untie the knots in her brain while working in their vegetable garden. She wonders whether the others are worth her efforts. Mathilde and Jade are tempted to forget about their carbon footprint and order new dresses. Massimo wonders if a painted canvas is an essential item.
