DRUG WAR IN COLOMBIA

Director(s): Jean-François DELASSUS

Writer(s): Jean-françois DELASSUS

In comparison with the barons of the Medellin cartel, the heads of the Sicilian mafia look like naughty boys. Colombian drug traffickers use violence, murder and terrorism in a radical, systematic, planned way. They waged full-scale war on the Colombian state. The cocaine trade has allowed gangsters from poor areas, such as Rodriguez Gacha or Pablo Escabar, to be among the twenty richest men in the world. Pablo Escobar also became the world's most wanted man...
These two one-hour films, using only recent archive footage, tell the story of the rise to power of these gangsters, of their fight against the state of law that they try to dominate. An account of the many tragedies and great chaos that these men have caused in Colombia and the whole of Central America.
